

FROM VAUDEVILLE

(Bowen and Bowen.)

"What do you do for a living?"

"My wife takes in washing."

"I wonder if I know your wife."

"She was one of the Berry sisters."

"Which one?"

"Huckle."

"I'm not feeling well today."

"Here's some medicine, mum. Take a dose at 8 o'clock."

"Yea."

"And if you're not dead at 9 take another dose."

"I've a great mind to give you a job. I'll give you work if you can show me a reference from your last employer."

"Sure I can. Here it is."

"This letter says that you're a low down, lying, drunken thief, and that—"

"Hold on. I gave you the wrong letter. That must be the one my wife wrote to her mother and gave me to mail. Here's my reference."

"Why, this reference is dated 1872."

"That's the last time I had a job."

HE SAW THEM

Judge—So you say words passed between the husband and wife in this case? Did you hear what they were?

Witness—No, but I saw them. He threw a dictionary at her!

"We can play the most intricate tunes in our militia band," said the sergeant.

"I'll bet you can't play the 'airs' your drum major puts on," said his friend.

"Uncle, I heard father say that he had hatched out a scheme. How would he do that?"

"Why, Clarence, he probably set his mind on it!"

Music Dealer—And here's the Lucia sextet—a very popular record.

Mrs. Rox (virtuously)—No, not for a family machine. There's too much of this sex business nowadays!

CHINA BOYS

SPORT BUSINESS

Mother—So you stopped to fish? Well, any bites?

Johnny—Yep. A sucker from the hotel bought some more of my dead minnows for bait and another guy gave me a quarter to tell him where not to fish.
